Maximising Microsoft Unlock the full potential of Purview eDiscovery

Collecting data for investigations, litigation, divestments or for any other purpose, often falls into the IT team's remit. Microsoft Purview's eDiscovery functionality is included at all licence levels and facilitates in-house collection and review. It is a powerful tool with advanced search capabilities and ever-evolving features.

The challenges

Use of Microsoft Purview eDiscovery without expert guidance and the right expertise, potentially risks:

- Over-collecting data, inflating legal review costs and risking over-disclosure.
- Under-collecting data, jeopardising legal outcomes.
- Blind spots created by encrypted content and partial indexing.
- Running into complications when dealing with email, raising questions about archiving, file attachments, meta data preservation.
- Failing to preserve data and effectively apply legal holds.

Our experience

“Calling the eDiscovery experts saved us time and gave us confidence we had found all the evidence available.”

We helped a small IT team to conduct a thorough investigation of a complicated matter, supporting them to use Microsoft Purview eDiscovery. This client came to us because they had rarely used the Purview eDiscovery tools and were concerned about messing up the investigation.

Our experts worked alongside their team, advising them on how to build and run their searches across their data estate, to ensure all relevant data was captured defensibly. This saved considerable time and didn't distract IT from their day-to-day support duties. It has also saved time and costs in review, by ensuring only relevant data was passed to the legal team.

When a data collection in Microsoft Purview resulted in a large volume of content to investigate, our client started to have difficulties in scaling to meet the amount of data under review. We helped them to manage the volumes through our AI powered platform, Reveal, which has innovative search capabilities and review that scales to support the largest volumes and widest range of file formats for most investigations. Our support and forensic data analysis has helped them to find insights faster.

“We found this excellent team when we had bitten off more than we could chew in terms of data volumes.”
